NOTICE OF MOTIONS AND MOTIONS

TO ALL PARTIES AND THEIR ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

3 PLEASE TAKE NOTICE THAT on September 7, 2023 at 10:00 a.m., or as soon thereafter
4 as the matter may be heard in Courtroom 8 of the above entitled Court, located at 450 Golden Gate 5 Avenue, San Francisco, CA, 94102, Defendants the County of San Mateo and Christina Corpus, in 6 her official capacity as Sheriff of San Mateo County (collectively “Defendants”) will, and hereby 7 do, move this Court to dismiss all of the claims for relief of A.B.O. Comix, Kenneth Roberts, 8 Zachary Greenberg, Ruben Gonzalez-Magallanes, Domingo Aguilar, Kevin Prasad, and Wumi 9 Oladipo’s (collectively “Plaintiffs”) pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(c). The 10 Motion will be made on the grounds that Plaintiffs’ Amended Complaint fails to plead facts 11 sufficient to state any claim for relief. Additionally, Defendants will, and hereby do, move the 12 Court pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) to dismiss Plaintiff A.B.O. Comix’s, 13 Plaintiff Zachary Greenberg’s, and Plaintiff’s Wumi Oladipo’s claims on the grounds that they all 14 lack standing to pursue their claims.

15 These Motions are based on this Notice of Motions and Motions, the Memorandum of 16 Points and Authorities, the Request for Judicial Notice and all exhibits attached thereto, the oral 17 argument of counsel, and the pleadings and papers filed in this matter.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

20 As Judge Koh observed, “engag[ing] in forum shopping in an attempt to avoid legal 21 precedent in [another] Circuit” is a dishonorable practice that “diminishes any deference owed to 22 [a plaintiff’s] choice of forum.” Burgess v. HP, Inc., 2017 WL 467845, at *9 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 23 2017). That is exactly what Plaintiffs have attempted here. They initiated this suit, initially raising 24 both California and federal claims, challenging San Mateo County’s (the “County”) policy of 25 digitizing incoming inmate mail and providing copies to inmates on tablets and kiosks using Smart 26 Communication’s (“Smart”) services. The County implemented this policy to prevent exposure to 27 fentanyl and other opioids, which are easily introduced into jails by mail “through paper that ha[s] 28 been soaked, sprayed or otherwise treated with illicit substances before being mailed to prisoners.”

1 Human Rights Def. Center v. Bd of Cnty. Comm'rs, ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2023 WL 1473863, at *1
 2 (D.N.H. Feb. 2, 2023) (“HRDC”).

3 Plaintiffs’ original Complaint (“OC”) averred that the County’s mail policy “violates the 4 First Amendment” because “it is not rationally related to any legitimate penological goals” and 5 “leaves no adequate alternatives to communication” and “violates the Fourth Amendment because 6 it constitutes an unreasonable search and seizure of . . . information in which Plaintiffs and others
 7 maintain a reasonable expectation of privacy.” OC ¶¶ 88, 91. After Defendants removed the action 8 to federal court, Plaintiffs filed an Amended Complaint (“AC”), which omitted their federal 9 claims. The AC claims the mail policy “serves no legitimate penological purpose,”¹ but “no longer 10 raises claims under federal law” and instead brings identical claims “under Article I, Section 2 and 11 Article I, Section 13 of the California Constitution.”² Plaintiffs then moved to remand the case to 12 state court, representing their “federal claims have been dropped.” Dkt. 28 at 4:13.

13 Plaintiffs’ jurisdictional gymnastics are a blatant attempt to evade controlling Ninth Circuit 14 authority set forth in Crime Justice & Am. v. Honea, 876 F.3d 966, 976 (9th Cir. 2017), which is 15 binding on this Court and is fatal to both their state and federal claims. Honea upheld Butte 16 County’s policy banning the delivery of certain types of inmate mail due to safety concerns. Id. at 17 969. As a substitute, the jail digitized the banned mail and installed “electronic kiosks” for inmates 18 “to access electronic versions” of it. Id. at 971. The plaintiff argued Butte County’s policy was an 19 unlawful “suppression of expression” and served no “legitimate penological interests.” Id. at 972– 20 73. The Ninth Circuit disagreed. Under the federal Constitution, “[r]egulations regarding the 21 review of [prisoner’s] mail are evaluated under the . . . test set forth in Turner v. Safley.” Reynolds 22 v. Rios, 2011 WL 617424, at *2 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 10, 2011). Applying the Turner test, Honea held 23 Butte County’s mail policy was “reasonably related to a legitimate penological objective” and that 24 providing “kiosks” for review of “mail to inmates” is “an adequate substitute for regular 25 distribution of paper copies.” 876 F.3d at 970, 976, 978. Thus, Butte County’s digitized mail 26 policy “faithfully adhered to the Turner analysis.” Id. at 972.

27

² Dkt. 28 at 3:13–14, 2:15–17.

1 Seeking to sidestep Honea, the AC purports to assert “novel California constitutional 2 claims” that Plaintiffs represent are governed by substantively different rules than analogous 3 federal claims because inmate rights under “the state constitution’s free speech and privacy 4 guarantees are . . . broader than . . . their federal analogs.” Dkt. 32 at 2:2–3, 3:24–25. This 5 misrepresents hornbook law. California has codified prisoners’ constitutional and statutory civil 6 rights in Penal Code § 2600, which provides that during “confinement,” prisoners may be 7 “deprived of rights” if such deprivation “is reasonably related to legitimate penological interests.” 8 Section 2600 is “designed to conform California law to the [U.S. Supreme Court’s] decision in 9 Turner.” Cnty. of Nev. v. Superior Court, 236 Cal. App. 4th 1001, 1009 n.2 (2015). Consequently, 10 all prisoner free-speech claims under California law are “governed by the high court’s test in 11 Turner.” Thompson v. Dep’t of Corr., 25 Cal. 4th 117, 130 (2001). Thus, the Ninth Circuit’s 12 controlling decision in Honea likewise dooms Plaintiffs’ state-law claims. See 876 F.3d at 971–73.
 13 Plaintiffs’ search-and-seizure claims also fail because California law applies the same bright-line 14 rule applicable to inmate Fourth Amendment cases: “a person incarcerated in a jail or prison 15 possesses no justifiable expectation of privacy,” and consequently, inmate communications may 16 always be subjected to “official surveillance.” People v. Loyd, 27 Cal. 4th 997, 1001–01 (2002).
 17 Accordingly, “[e]xcept where [a] communication is a confidential one addressed to an attorney, 18 court or public official, a prisoner has no expectation of privacy with respect to letters posted by 19 [the prisoner].” People v. Garvey, 99 Cal. App. 3d 320, 323 (1979).

20 In addition to these fatal defects, Plaintiffs’ claims must be dismissed for four other 21 independent reasons. First, lead-Plaintiff A.B.O. Comix (“A.B.O.”) does not possess associational 22 standing to bring this suit because, among other things, it must plead facts showing that “it is a 23 properly formed organization with the corporate status and the members necessary to even attempt 24 to claim associational standing.” Made in the USA Found. v. Gen. Motors, Corp., 2005 WL 25 3676030, at *2 (D.D.C. Mar. 31, 2005). The AC pleads only that A.B.O. “is a collective of 26 artists.” AC ¶ 5. A “collective” is not a “properly formed organization.”

27 Second, Plaintiff Zachary Greenberg likewise lacks standing because he is no longer 28 incarcerated in the County’s jails. AC ¶ 21. A plaintiff who “is no longer incarcerated in [a]

1 Jail . . . is not subject to the Jail’s polic[ies]” and “has no standing to seek . . . injunctive relief” 2 regarding such policies. King v. Baca, 2001 WL 682793, at *3, *5 (C.D. Cal. June 12, 2001).

3 Third, Plaintiff Wumi Oladipo, who purportedly is Mr. Greenberg’s “significant other,” 4 likewise lacks standing. See AC ¶ 86. Even if her relationship with Mr. Greenberg conferred 5 standing to challenge the mail policy while he was incarcerated in the County’s jails, neither she 6 nor Mr. Greenberg are “subject to the Jail’s [mail] polic[ies]” now. See King, 2001 WL 682793, at 7 *3, *5. Thus, she “has no standing to seek . . . injunctive relief” regarding such policies. See id.

8 Fourth, to bring a claim under California law, prisoners “must exhaust available 9 administrative remedies before filing a lawsuit.” Parthemore v. Col, 221 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 1380 10 (2013). And “it is [the plaintiffs’] burden to plead and establish as a part of their case in chief that 11 they exhausted their administrative remedy” in order to state a prima facie case. Westinghouse 12 Elec. Corp. v. Cnty. of Los Angeles, 42 Cal. App. 3d 32, 37 (1974). Here, the County has 13 established a grievance procedure that enables “any inmate [to] file a grievance relating to 14 conditions of confinement,” including “mail use procedures.” Request for Judicial Notice (“RJN”) 15 Ex. A at § 612.2. Plaintiffs’ AC does not even acknowledge the County’s grievance procedure—16 much less plead that Plaintiffs have exhausted their remedies under that policy. Thus, Plaintiffs 17 have not satisfied their “burden to plead and establish as a part of their case in chief that they 18 exhausted their administrative remedy.” Westinghouse, 42 Cal. App. 3d at 37 (emphasis added).

19 II. STATEMENT OF FACTS ALLEGED BY PLAINTIFFS

20 “This case concerns San Mateo County’s use of [Smart’s] MailGuard service, which the 21 County uses to eliminate physical mail behind bars.” AC ¶ 26. Before April 2021, non-legal mail 22 was “inspect[ed]” by jail staff “for the presence of drugs or other threats to facility security” and 23 “[o]nce approved, it was delivered” to the inmate.” Id. ¶ 31. But in April 2021, the County 24 instituted a policy “to eliminate physical mail within its [jails]” and began “digitizing incoming 25 mail using [Smart’s MailGuard] services.” Id. ¶ 32. MailGuard “redirects physical mail” to 26 Smart’s facility where it “open[s], scan[s], and upload[s] digital copies of the mail into a 27 proprietary database” for inspection by jail staff. Id. ¶ 26. Jail staff then “review mail” and “[i]f 28 approved, a digital copy of the mail may be accessed by its recipient, typically via tablets or

1 kiosks.” Id. In 2021, “the County’s then-Sheriff, Carlos Bolanos, announced that the County’s 2 mail policy [is] meant to “prioritize . . . safety and security” Id. ¶ 9. The County initiated the new 3 mail policy “over concerns about ‘fentanyl exposures.’” Id. County officials explained that the 4 policy was initiated “to help keep everyone safe since there ha[ve] been some concerns regarding 5 fentanyl exposures with the old mail system [the County’s jails] w[ere] using.” Id. ¶ 49.

6 III. ANALYSIS

7 A. Plaintiffs’ Claims Should Be Dismissed Because They Are Not Justiciable

8 1. Lead Plaintiff-A.B.O. Lacks Associational Standing

9 To satisfy Article III’s standing requirement, “a complaint must state a plausible claim that 10 the plaintiff has suffered an injury in fact fairly traceable to the actions of the defendant that is 11 likely to be redressed by a favorable decision on the merits.” Williams v. Lew, 819 F.3d 466, 472 12 (D.C. Cir. 2016). To do so, a party must establish more than “a keen interest in the issue” being 13 litigated. Hollingsworth v. Perry, 570 U.S. 693, 700 (2013). In particular, lead Plaintiff A.B.O.
 14 must satisfy Article III’s associational standing requirements. At the outset, it must plead facts 15 showing “it is a properly formed organization with the corporate status and the members necessary 16 to even attempt to claim associational standing.” Made in the USA Found., 2005 WL 3676030, at 17 *2. “[P]roperly formed” organizations recognized by our law include corporations (for-profit and 18 non-profit), partnerships, and LLCs. U.S. v. Kumar, 2016 WL 7369863, at *8 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 20, 19 2016). But the AC pleads only that A.B.O. “is a collective of artists . . .” AC ¶ 5. A “collective” 20 is not a “properly formed organization.” Indeed, the California Secretary of State has no record of 21 any corporation, LLC, or limited partnership of record called “A.B.O. Comix” or “ABO Comix” 22 that is authorized to do business in the State of California. See RJD Exs. B–C.

23 Even if A.B.O. could overcome this fatal defect (it cannot), it would still lack standing 24 because it is required to demonstrate that Defendants’ “behavior has frustrated its mission and 25 caused it to divert resources in response to that frustration of purpose.” E. Bay Sanctuary 26 Covenant v. Biden, 993 F.3d 640, 663 (9th Cir. 2021). An organization “cannot manufacture the 27 injury by incurring litigation costs or simply choosing to spend money fixing a problem that 28 otherwise would not affect the organization at all.” La Asociacion de Trabajadores de Lake Forest

1 v. City of Lake Forest, 624 F.3d 1083, 1088 (9th Cir. 2010). Instead, it must show “that it would 2 have suffered some other injury if it had not diverted resources to counteracting the problem.” Id.
3 This occurs when the organization is “forced to choose between suffering an injury and diverting 4 resources to counteract the injury.” Id. at 1088 n.4. In this case, A.B.O. failed to assert any factual 5 allegations in either its original or amended Complaints that it was forced to divert resources to 6 help its “members” because of the County’s actions. Various paragraphs in the AC refer to its 7 “members” and alleged violations of their rights. But it does not allege a diversion of its resources 8 that would allow a court to conclude it pleaded organizational standing on its own behalf.

The associational standing doctrine also requires A.B.O. to establish that:

- (a) its members would otherwise have standing to sue in their own right;
- (b) the interests it seeks to protect are germane to [its] purpose; and
- (c) neither the claim asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members in the lawsuit.

14 Assoc. Gen. Contractors v. Metro Water Dist., 159 F.3d 1178, 1181 (9th Cir. 1998). To meet the 15 first prong, A.B.O. “must show that a member suffers an injury-in-fact that is traceable to the 16 defendant and likely to be redressed by a favorable decision.” Id. at 1194. To prove the requisite 17 injury to a member, A.B.O. must make “specific allegations establishing that at least one 18 identified member had suffered or would suffer harm.” Summers v. Earth Island Inst., 555 U.S.
19 488, 498 (2009). To do so, A.B.O. must name specific members that would suffer alleged harm.
20 This is because, to establish standing, “an association must identify an affected member by name 21 and show that the member has suffered or will suffer harm.” Cal. Rifle & Pistol Ass’n, Inc. v. City
22 of Glendale 2022 WL 18142541, at *2 (C.D. Cal., Dec. 5, 2022); accord e.g., Summers, 555 U.S.
23 at 498 (no associational standing based on speculation unidentified members would be injured); 24 FW/PBS, Inc. v. City of Dallas, 493 U.S. 215, 235 (1990) (affidavit provided to establish standing 25 was insufficient because it did not name specific persons harmed by the challenged program).

26 In addition, courts evaluate whether an organization’s “members” possess “all of the 27 indicia of organization membership” such as “electing the members, being the only ones to serve 28 on the Commission, and financing its activities.” Hunt v. Wash. State Apple Advert. Com’n, 432

1 U.S. 333, 334 (1977). These indicia satisfy “the purposes that undergird the concept of 2 associational standing: that the organization is sufficiently identified with and subject to the 3 influence of those it seeks to represent as to have a ‘personal stake in the outcome of the 4 controversy.’” Oregon Advocacy Center v. Mink, 322 F.3d 1101, 1111 (9th Cir. 2003).

5 Here, A.B.O. has failed to identify a single member that has suffered or would suffer harm.
 6 Instead, it characterizes itself as “a collective of artists that works to amplify the voices of 7 incarcerated LGBTQ people through artistic expression. . . . It has nearly 450 incarcerated 8 members, including at least one member incarcerated in Maple Street Correctional Center with 9 whom [A.B.O.’s] staff has corresponded in the last year.” AC ¶ 59. A.B.O. alleges its injuries are 10 that the County’s mail policy has “deterred members of the collective from expressing themselves 11 as openly. [A.B.O.’s] staff and nonincarcerated members now hesitate to write as freely. . . .” Id.
 12 ¶ 62. These general allegations are clearly insufficient to establish associational standing. See 13 Assoc. Gen. Contractors v. Cal. Dep’t of Transp., 713 F.3d 1187, 1195 (9th Cir. 2013) (general 14 allegations in complaint insufficient to establish associational standing).

15 Specifically, A.B.O. has failed to identify specific members that have allegedly been 16 impacted by the mail policy as well as the specific harms suffered. A.B.O. has also not shown that 17 it is “sufficiently identified with and subject to the influence” of the individuals it seeks to 18 represent in this lawsuit. It has not shown that those individuals elect, serve, or finance its 19 activities. None of the inmate-Plaintiffs allege they are A.B.O. members or that A.B.O. even 20 represents their interests in this matter. Likewise, the AC does not allege what involvement, if any, 21 the other Plaintiffs have with A.B.O. Nor does it provide any details regarding A.B.O.’s 22 organizational structure or funding. These deficiencies demonstrate that A.B.O. lacks standing.

23 2. Plaintiffs Zachary Greenberg and Wumi Oladipo Lack Standing

 25 his conviction for assault with a deadly weapon,⁴ and is no longer incarcerated in any of the

1 County's jails.⁵ A plaintiff who "is no longer incarcerated in [a] Jail . . . is not subject to the Jail's 2 polic[ies]" and "has no standing to seek . . . injunctive relief" regarding such policies. King, 2001
 3 WL 682793, at *3, *5. This is because "[i]n the context of injunctive relief, a plaintiff has standing 4 only when the possibility of future injury is particular and concrete." O'Shea v. Littleton, 414 U.S.
 5 488, 496–97 (1974). "Past exposure to illegal conduct" is insufficient to establish "a present case 6 or controversy regarding injunctive relief." Id. at 495–96. Plaintiff Wumi Oladipo, who 7 purportedly is Mr. Greenberg's "significant other" also lacks standing. See AC ¶ 86. Assuming 8 arguendo that her relationship with Mr. Greenberg conferred standing to challenge the mail policy 9 while he was incarcerated in the County's jails, neither she nor Mr. Greenberg are "subject to the 10 Jail's [mail] polic[ies]" now. See King, 2001 WL 682793, at *3, *5. Thus, the AC's admissions 11 reveal that Mr. Greenberg and Ms. Oladipo both lack standing and their claims must be dismissed.

12 3. Plaintiffs Failed to Exhaust Their Administrative Remedies

13 To bring a claim under California law regarding the terms of confinement, a prisoner 14 "must exhaust available administrative remedies before filing a lawsuit." Parthemore, 221 Cal.
 15 App. 4th at 1380. This rule applies "even when the grievances involve an alleged constitutional 16 violation." In re Serna, 76 Cal. App. 3d 1010, 1014 (1978). In addition, "where remedy by appeal 17 is available" under a grievance policy, the plaintiff must also exhaust all avenues of appeal under 18 the policy "before redress may be had in the courts." Blake v. PUC of City & Cnty. of San 19 Francisco, 120 Cal. App. 2d 671, 673 (1953).

20 Under California law, "failure to exhaust administrative remedies" is not merely "an 21 affirmative defense." Westinghouse, 42 Cal. App. 3d at 37. Rather, when a plaintiff sues a state 22 agency that provides a grievance procedure, exhaustion of all avenues of review under that 23 procedure is an element of the plaintiff's case in chief. Id. In such cases, "it is [the plaintiffs'] 24 burden to plead and establish as a part of their case in chief that they exhausted their 25 administrative remedy" in order to state a prima facie case. Id. "Under California law, the 26 requirement of exhaustion of administrative remedies is a jurisdictional prerequisite to resort to the 27 courts." Phillips-Kerley v. City of Fresno, 2018 WL 5255224, at *4 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 19, 2018). For 28 ⁵ AC ¶ 21.

1 this reason, California courts recognize that a prisoner’s “failure to exhaust administrative 2 remedies is a proper basis for [dismissal]” for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be 3 granted. Parthemore, 221 Cal. App. 4th at 1379.

4 California law dictates that jails “shall develop written policies and procedures whereby all 5 incarcerated persons have the opportunity and ability to submit and appeal grievances relating to 6 any conditions of confinement, including but not limited to: . . . mail . . . procedures” 15 7 C.C.R. § 1073. Pursuant to this law, the County has established a grievance procedure which 8 enables “any inmate [to] file a grievance relating to conditions of confinement,” including “mail 9 use procedures.” RJN Ex. A at § 612.2. To initiate the procedure, an inmate must “complete[] [an] 10 inmate grievance form” which must “be filed . . . within 14 days of the complaint or issue.” Id. at 11 § 612.3, § 612.3.2. The procedure dictates that “[u]pon receiving a completed inmate grievance 12 form, the supervisor shall ensure that the grievance is investigated and resolved or denied in a 13 timely manner, as established by the Division Commander.” Id. at § 612.3.2. It further provides: 14 “Inmates may appeal the finding of a grievance to the Division Commander as the final level of 15 appeal within five days of receiving the findings of the original grievance. The Division 16 Commander will review the grievance and either confirm or deny it.” Id. at § 612.3.3.

17 Plaintiffs’ AC does not even acknowledge the existence of the County’s grievance 18 procedure—much less plead that they have exhausted their rights pursuant to that procedure, 19 including their rights of appeal. Accordingly, Plaintiffs have not satisfied their “burden to plead 20 and establish as a part of their case in chief that they exhausted their administrative remedy.”
 21 Westinghouse, 42 Cal. App. 3d at 37. As such, their claims must be dismissed. See Parthemore, 22 221 Cal. App. 4th at 1379; accord Phillips-Kerley, 2018 WL 5255224, at *4.

23 B. Plaintiffs’ Claims Fail on the Merits as a Matter of Law

24 Even if the justiciability defects in the AC were not fatal to Plaintiffs’ claims (they are), 25 their claims still must be dismissed because they are barred on the merits as a matter of law.

26 1. Plaintiffs’ Search-and-Seizure Claim Is Patently Frivolous

27 Plaintiffs dedicate nearly a third of their AC—some 28 of their 90 paragraphs—to 28 asserting the County’s mail policy is an “invasion of privacy” and thus “constitutes an

1 unreasonable search and seizure of correspondence and other information in which Plaintiffs and 2 others maintain a reasonable expectation of privacy” in violation of Article I, § 13 of the 3 California Constitution. AC ¶¶ 48, 90; accord e.g., id. ¶¶ 2, 6–9, 12, 29–30, 33, 41, 43–47, 57, 62, 4 64, 68, 72, 75, 79, 81–82, 86–87. This contention is frivolous.

5 Article I, § 13 is California’s “counterpart to the Fourth Amendment[’s]” search-and-6 seizure clause. People v. Sabo, 185 Cal. App. 3d 845, 448 n.1 (1986). Like the Fourth 7 Amendment, a claim under Article I, § 13 turns on whether the person invoking its protection had 8 “a reasonable expectation of privacy.” People v. Abbot, 162 Cal. App. 3d 635, 639 (1984); accord
 9 Faunce v. Cate, 222 Cal. App. 4th 166, 171 (2013) (“to allege an actionable violation of [the] right
 10 to privacy under . . . the California Constitution,” plaintiffs “must show [they] had a reasonable 11 expectation of privacy”). This is because a “search,” within the meaning of § 13, only occurs when 12 a government agent intrudes upon a “sphere” in which society recognizes “a reasonable 13 expectation of privacy.” People v. Dickson, 91 Cal. App. 3d 409, 414 (1979). “Determining 14 whether an expectation of privacy is . . . ‘reasonable’ necessarily entails a balancing of interests.
 15 The two interests here are the interest of society in the security of its penal institutions and the 16 interest of the prisoner in privacy.” Sacramento Cnty. Deputy Sheriff’s Ass’n v. Cnty. of 17 Sacramento, 51 Cal. App. 4th 1468, 1480, 1485 (1996) (quoting Hudson v. Palmer, 468 U.S. 517, 18 527–28 (1984)). And in jails, both the federal and the California Constitutions “strike [that] 19 balance in favor of institutional security,” because jail security “is ‘central to all other corrections 20 goals.’” Sacramento Cnty., 51 Cal. App. 4th at 1480 (quoting Hudson, 468 U.S. at 527–28).

21 Accordingly, California law, like the Fourth Amendment applies a bright-line rule to 22 inmate claims: “a person incarcerated in a jail or prison possesses no justifiable expectation of 23 privacy.” Loyd, 27 Cal. 4th at 1001 (emphasis added). A person “detained in jail cannot 24 reasonably expect to enjoy the privacy afforded to a person in society” because the “lack of 25 privacy is a necessary adjunct to . . . imprisonment.” Id. Because it is settled under California law 26 that communications with inmates do “not enjoy a justifiable expectation of privacy,” such 27 communications may always be subjected to “official surveillance.” Id. at 1002. California law 28 does not impede such “surveillance” in any way. Id. at 1004, 1010.

1 In Loyd, an inmate who was incarcerated in a “jail awaiting trial,” asserted that authorities
 2 violated California law by “secretly monitoring” her communications “with her nonattorney
 3 visitors” for the sole “purpose of gathering evidence” against her. Id. at 999–1000. California’s 4 High Court rejected this contention, holding that California’s laws governing “surveillance” of 5 inmate communications “conformed to federal law.” Id. at 1003–04, 1010. And this law 6 recognizes, as explained above, that inmate communications do “not enjoy a justifiable 7 expectation of privacy.” Id. at 1002, 1010. This is because “it is obvious that a jail shares none of 8 the attributes of privacy of a home, an automobile, an office, or a hotel room” and that “[i]n 9 prison, official surveillance has traditionally been the order of the day.” Id. at 1002 (quoting Lanza 10 v. State of N.Y., 370 U.S. 139, 143 (1962)). And “[w]hile the deprivation of a prisoner’s rights or 11 privileges requires penological objectives, the legitimacy of jailhouse monitoring of inmate 12 [communications] is based on precisely these objectives.” Loyd, 27 Cal. 4th at 1004 (citation 13 omitted). Accordingly, “California law . . . permits law enforcement officers to monitor and 14 record unprivileged [inmate] communications without limitation—even when such 15 “surveillance” is unrelated “to the maintenance of institutional security” and is for the sole purpose 16 of “gather[ing] evidence of crime.” Id. at 1003–04, 1010 (emphasis added).

17 This bright-line rule applies with equal vigor to non-legal inmate mail, which is simply 18 another form of surveillable inmate communication. In Garvey, a prisoner “in jail awaiting trial” 19 for attacking a man in a bar “wrote to a friend” admitting that he “kick[ed] [the victim] in the 20 head.” 99 Cal. App. 3d at 322. “The jailer monitoring outgoing mail copied [the prisoner’s] letter” 21 and provided it to the prosecutor. Id. The letter was admitted against the prisoner at trial, and he 22 was convicted. Id. The court in Garvey held that the jailers’ surveillance of the letter did not 23 violate any of the prisoner’s rights. This is because “[e]xcept where the communication is a 24 confidential one addressed to an attorney, court, or public official, a prisoner has no 25 expectation of privacy with respect to letters posted by [the prisoner].” Id. at 323 (emphasis 26 added). So too here. Accordingly, Plaintiffs’ search-and-seizure claims are patently frivolous.⁶ 27

28 ⁶ As Loyd and Garvey show, California law is in accord with the “‘bright line’ rule” which

2. Plaintiffs' Free-Speech Claim Fails as a Matter of Law

Plaintiffs claim the mail policy “violates Article I, Section 2 of the California Constitution” because it inhibits inmates’ freedom “to express themselves” and “is not rationally related to any legitimate penological goals.” AC ¶¶ 2, 89. They represent that this count “raises novel claims under [California law] regarding the constitutionality of the County’s decision to [digitize] non-legal physical mail”⁷ and that these claims are governed by substantively different rules than analogous claims under the First Amendment because inmate rights under “the state constitution’s free speech . . . guarantees are . . . broader than . . . their federal analogs.”⁸ Not so.

9 Article I, § 2 “is equivalent to the First Amendment’s free speech clause.” Gerawan 10 Farming Inc. v. Lyons, 24 Cal. 4th 468, 512 (2000). First Amendment law recognizes that 11 “[r]egulations regarding the review of [prisoner’s] incoming mail are evaluated under the . . . test 12 set forth in Turner v. Safley.” Reynolds, 2011 WL 617424, at *2; accord In re Collins, 86 Cal.
13 App. 4th 1176, 1178, 1182 (2001). California codified prisoners’ constitutional and statutory civil 14 rights in Penal Code § 2600, which provides that during “confinement” inmates may be “deprived 15 of rights” if such deprivation “is reasonably related to legitimate penological interests.” Section 16 2600 is “designed to conform California law to the decision in Turner.” Cnty. of Nev., 236 Cal.
17 App. 4th at 1009 n.2. Plaintiffs claim § 2600 “does not . . . interpret the state constitution’s 18 independent guarantee of rights.” Dkt. 32 at 4:16–19 (emphasis added). Not so. California’s governs Fourth Amendment jurisprudence. See Hudson, 468 U.S. at 523. The Fourth Amendment, like California law, dictates that “prisoners have no legitimate expectation of privacy”—not even in “their cells and lockers.” Id. at 529–30. As a consequence, they cannot “invoke the protections of the Fourth Amendment.” Id. And, as Judge Koh ruled, Hudson’s axiom, like its California law analog applied in Loyd and Garvey, “applies equally to an inmate’s incoming mail.” Treglia v. Cate, 2012 WL 3731774, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 28, 2012). This is because “inmates well know that their permitted communications with people outside the prison,” including “non-legal mail” are always “subject to monitoring.” U.S. v. Yandell, 2022 WL 1607923, at *4 (E.D. Cal. May 20, 2022). Thus, as Judge Patel held, “[i]t is settled law that prisoners have no legitimate expectation of privacy in their [nonprivileged] correspondence.” Crump v. Gomez, 1995 WL 274359, at *2 (N.D. Cal. April 27, 1995) (citation omitted) (emphasis added). This is because the state’s security interest “justifies [the] minor burden placed on [a prisoner’s] freedom to communicate with friends and relatives.” Id. (citation omitted). Thus, jail officials “cannot be held liable for reading [a prisoner’s] non-privileged correspondence.” Id.

²⁸ ⁷ Dkt. 28 at 5:4–5, 5:11–12.

⁸ Dkt. 32 at 3:24–25.

1 Supreme Court held that § 2600 embodies the sum total of all “statutory as well as constitutional
2 rights” enjoyed by prisoners under California law. In re Qawi, 32 Cal. 4th 1, 21 (2004) (emphasis
3 added). Thus, all inmate free-speech claims under California law are “governed by the high 4 court’s test in Turner.” Thompson, 25 Cal. 4th at 130 (2001). This includes claims under the 5 “California constitution.” Snow v. Woodford, 128 Cal. App. 4th 383, 389, 390 n.3 (2005).

6 While California sometimes “may choose to depart” from U.S. Supreme Court doctrine in 7 “interpreting” constitutional rights available under its own law, it has not done so with regard to 8 the specific law governing this case. See Dkt. 28 at 6:15–16 (emphasis added). Rather, the 9 controlling law here falls under the much more common maxim that recognizes when a California 10 and a federal constitutional provision are substantially similar, there usually is “no basis for a 11 broader interpretation of the California [provision]” because “California courts look to [U.S.] 12 Supreme Court authority interpreting the [analogous] federal constitutional provision” when 13 “[i]nterpreting [a] California constitutional provision.” 21st Cent. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court, 127 14 Cal. App. 4th 1351, 1357 n.2 (2005). “The general policy is that ‘cogent reasons must exist before 15 a state court in construing a provision of the state Constitution will depart from the construction 16 placed by the Supreme Court of the United States on a similar provision in the federal 17 Constitution.’” Sacramento Cnty., 51 Cal. App. 4th at 1485–86 (quoting Raven v. Deukmejian, 52 18 Cal. 3d 336, 353 (1990)). Such cogent reasons do not exist here because California’s Supreme 19 Court has unanimously held that all prisoner civil rights claims under California statutory and 20 constitutional law are “governed by the high court’s test in Turner.” Thompson, 25 Cal. 4th at 130.

a. The Turner Test

22 Turner is “a rational-basis test.” Evans v. Skolnik, 997 F.3d 1060, 1071 n.8 (9th Cir. 2021).
23 Under it, a “regulation is valid if it is reasonably related to legitimate penological interests.”
24 Turner, 482 U.S. at 89. A regulation subject to such review may only be invalidated if a challenger 25 can prove that its purpose and its requirements are “so remote as to render the policy arbitrary or 26 irrational.” Id. at 89–90. “[J]udicial scrutiny under [such] rational basis review is typically so 27 deferential as to amount to a virtual rubber stamp.” Richard H. Fallon, Foreword: Implementing 28 the Constitution, 111 Harv. L. Rev. 56, 79 (1997).

1 The Turner test requires courts to evaluate regulations under four factors:

2 (1) whether there is a valid, rational connection between the 3 [challenged] policy and the legitimate governmental interest put 4 forward to justify it;

5 (2) whether there are alternative means of exercising the right;

6 (3) whether accommodating the asserted right will have an impact 7 on guards, other inmates and allocation of prison resources; and

8 (4) whether the policy is an “exaggerated response” to the prison’s 9 concerns.

10 In re Furnace, 185 Cal. App. 4th 649, 664 (2010). “California cases” applying Turner “have . . .
 11 stressed the need for courts to defer to prison authorities in running the prison system.” In re 12 Jenkins, 50 Cal. 4th 1167, 1175 (2010). This deference is mandated by the California 13 Constitution’s “separation of powers,” which, like its federal analog, recognizes that “[r]unning a 14 prison is an inordinately difficult undertaking that requires expertise, planning, and the 15 commitment of resources, all of which are particularly within the province of the legislative and 16 executive branches of government.” Id. (quoting Turner, 482 U.S. at 84–85). Operation of jails is 17 “a task that has been committed to the responsibility of those branches.” Jenkins, 50 Cal. 4th at 18 1175 (quoting Turner, 482 U.S. at 84–85). Thus, California law mandates “deference” to jail 19 administrators that “limits judicial intervention to demonstrate instances of actions by prison 20 officials that are arbitrary, capricious, irrational, or an abuse of discretion granted those given the 21 responsibility of operating prisons.” Jenkins, 50 Cal. 4th at 1175.

22 Accordingly, Turner demands that courts show “sensitivity to ‘the delicate balance that 23 administrators must strike between the order and security of the internal prison environment and 24 the legitimate demands of those on the ‘outside’ who seek to enter that environment, in person or 25 through the written word.’” Collins, 86 Cal. App. 4th at 1182 (quoting Thornburgh v. Abbott, 490 26 U.S. 401, 407 (1989)). Courts must acknowledge “certain proposed interactions, though seemingly 27 innocuous to laymen, have potentially significant implications for the order and security of the 28 prison.” Collins, 86 Cal. App. 4th at 1182. Thus, courts must afford “considerable deference to 29 the determinations of prison administrators who, in the interest of security, regulate the relations 30 between prisoners and the outside world.” Id. (quoting Thornburgh, 490 U.S. at 407–08).

1 Denying such deference ““would seriously hamper” jail administrators’ “ability to 2 anticipate security problems and to adopt innovative solutions to the intractable problems of prison
3 administration.”” Woods v. Horton, 167 Cal. App. 4th 658, 673 (2008) (quoting Turner, 481 U.S.
4 at 89). This would “distort the decision making process, for every administrative judgment would 5 be subject to the possibility that some court somewhere would conclude that it had a less 6 restrictive way of solving the problem at hand.” Turner, 481 U.S. at 89. Here, the allegations of 7 Plaintiffs’ AC amount to admissions that the mail policy satisfies Turner’s and Penal Code 8 § 2600’s deferential rational basis test as a matter of law.

11 The recent decision in HRDC and the Ninth Circuit’s controlling decision in Honea, 12 establish that the County’s mail policy satisfies Turner and § 2600 as a matter of law. In HRDC, 13 the court upheld a strikingly similar mail policy implemented by Stratford County, New 14 Hampshire. See HRDC, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2023 WL 1473863, at *1. Stratford’s policy “ban[ned] 15 all incoming inmate mail, including books and other publications.” Id. (emphasis added). The 16 jailers did this because they were “concerned about the security risk posed by incoming inmate 17 mail” since narcotics, particularly fentanyl, can enter the jail “through paper that ha[s] been 18 soaked, sprayed, or otherwise treated with illicit substances before being mailed to prisoners.” Id.
19 “The solution came in the form of electronic tablets.” Id. at *2 (emphasis added). Like the 20 County’s mail policy at issue here, Stratford began digitizing “all incoming (non-legal) mail” and 21 made it available on “electronic tablets the Jail provides to all its inmates.” Id. at *1–*2. The court 22 held this policy satisfied Turner’s rational-basis test because “restricting inmate access to opioids 23 like Suboxone and fentanyl” is a “legitimate penological interest[] under Turner,” and by allowing 24 inmates to send and receive mail digitally using “electronic tablets,” the jail “provide[d] prisoners 25 with alternate ways to exercise the infringed-upon right.” Id. at *2, *7–8.

26 The Ninth Circuit’s controlling decision in Honea confirms HRDC was rightly decided.
27 Honea concerned a Butte County policy “prohibiting delivery of unsolicited commercial mail to 28 inmates.” 876 F.3d at 969. As a substitute, the jail digitized the banned materials and installed

1 “electronic kiosks” for inmates “to access electronic versions” of the mail. Id. at 971. Butte
2 County’s ban was motivated by much less serious security threats than those involved in HRDC
3 and in the case at bar. The jail was concerned, inter alia, that inmates may “use paper to cover 4 windows, speakers, and lights, to clog toilets,” or “start fires.” Id. at 970.

5 The plaintiff claimed “the jail’s [mail] ban” infringed on inmates’ free-speech rights. Id. at 6 971. But, applying the Turner test, the Ninth Circuit held Butte County’s policy was “reasonably 7 related to a legitimate penological objective” and providing “kiosks” for review of “mail to 8 inmates” is “an adequate substitute for regular distribution of paper copies.” Id. at 970, 976, 978.
9 Thus, Butte County “faithfully adhered to the Turner analysis” in enacting its digital-mail policy.
10 Id. at 972. As explained in more detail below, HRDC and Honea conclusively establish that the 11 County’s mail policy at issue in this case satisfies the Turner test and § 2600 as a matter of law.

c. The Policy Satisfies All the Turner Factors as a Matter of Law

(i) The Mail Policy Furthers Neutral and Legitimate State Objectives and Is Rationally Related to Those Objectives

15 The first Turner factor asks whether “the regulation [is] reasonably related to legitimate 16 security interests.” Turner, 482 U.S. at 91. In determining whether an objective is legitimate, 17 courts must “[a]cknowledge[] the expertise of prison officials.” Collins, 86 Cal. App. 4th at 1182 18 (quoting Thornburgh, 490 U.S. at 407). This is because “courts are ill equipped to deal with the 19 complex and difficult problems of prison administration” and based on their “expertise,” jail 20 officials may reasonably conclude that “certain proposed interactions, though seemingly 21 innocuous to laymen, have potentially significant implications for the order and security of the 22 prison.” Collins, 86 Cal. App. 4th at 1182. Plaintiffs plead that the County ““change[d] . . . the 23 way”” inmates ““receive mail” to ‘prioritize the safety and security of those in our correctional 24 facilities.”” AC ¶ 49 (purporting to quote Defendants). Specifically, the County initiated the new 25 mail policy “over concerns about ‘fentanyl exposures.’” Id. ¶ 9. The policy changes were made 26 ““to help keep everyone safe since there ha[ve] been some concerns regarding fentanyl exposures 27 with the old mail system [the jails] were using.”” Id. ¶ 49 (purporting to quote Defendants).

28 This objective is both “neutral” and “legitimate.” See Turner, 482 U.S. at 90. It is “neutral”

1 because it applies “without regard to the content of the expression.”⁹ See id. And “[c]ourts have 2 routinely found that maintaining prison security” and “deterring drug use within prisons . . . are 3 legitimate penological interests.” HRDC, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2023 WL 1473863, at *6 (citing 4 Turner, 482 U.S. at 90; Overton v. Bazzetta, 539 U.S. 126, 134 (2003); Beard v. Banks, 548 U.S.
5 521, 530 (2006)). California courts likewise agree mitigating the introduction of “drugs into . . .
6 prison” is a legitimate penological interest. In re Espinoza, 192 Cal. App. 4th 97, 108 (2011).
7 Thus, it is beyond cavil that “restricting inmate access to opioids like . . . fentanyl in particular are 8 legitimate penological interests.” HRDC, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2023 WL 1473863, at *7.

9 The policy is “rationally related” to the objective of protecting prisoners and staff from 10 “fentanyl exposures.” In light of “the significant deference granted to corrections officials,” courts 11 cannot weigh evidence in determining whether the rational-relationship requirement is met. Id. at 12 6. All that is required is that “the regulation has a logical connection to” a “legitimate government 13 interest[.]” Friend v. Kolodzieczak, 923 F.2d 126, 127 (9th Cir. 1991). It “makes logical sense” 14 that “bann[ing] all incoming personal inmate mail” will reduce “inmate access to opioids.” HRDC, 15 __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2023 WL 1473863, at *2, *7, *8. Fentanyl is introduced into jails “through 16 paper that ha[s] been soaked, sprayed or otherwise treated with illicit substances before being 17 mailed to prisoners.” Id. at *1. And there can be no doubt fentanyl “introduction pose[s] a risk to 18 the health, safety, and security of [a] Jail’s prisoners and staff.” Id. at *7. Thus, “a rational 19 relationship” exists “between the policy” and “legitimate penological interests.” See id.

(ii) The Policy Provides Alternative Means for Prisoners to Exercise Their Right to Use the Mail

22 “The second Turner factor asks ‘whether there are alternative means that remain open to 23 prison inmates.’” Honea, 876 F.3d at 975–76 (quoting Turner, 482 U.S. at 90). Where jail officials 24 have provided such alternative avenues, “courts should be particularly conscious of the measure of ⁹ A regulation is “neutral” if it imposes legitimate time, place, and manner restrictions on a particular medium of expression “without regard to [the] content” of the communications using the regulated medium. Collins, 86 Cal. App. 4th at 1185. For example, a state may impose volume restrictions on a “noisy sound truck,” but it may not impose volume restrictions that differ “based on hostility—or favoritism—towards the underlying message expressed” by the truck. R.A.V. v. City of St. Paul, 505 U.S. 377, 386 (1992).

1 judicial deference owed to corrections officials . . . in gauging the validity of the regulation.”
 2 Turner, 482 U.S. at 90. The alternative “need not be ideal”—it “need only be available.” Overton, 3 539 U.S. at 135. When a policy “limits a form of communication, the prison need not offer an 4 identical alternative.” HRDC, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2023 WL 1473863, at *6. It only needs to “offer 5 other means of communication generally, such that the regulation does not result in a ban on 6 expression altogether.” Id. Moreover, “Turner does not require that the alternative avenue provide 7 exactly the same level of communication as the plaintiff’s preferred method, only that other means 8 of expression be available.” Honea, 876 F.3d at 976.

9 Plaintiffs conclusorily assert that the mail policy “leaves no adequate alternatives to 10 communication via physical mail.” AC ¶ 89. But Honea proves that this assertion is untrue as a 11 matter of law. Like in HRDC and Honea, the County has not banned prisoners from sending or 12 receiving mail altogether. Rather, the County provides the same communications in a different 13 form. It “digitiz[es] incoming mail” and provides these digitized copies to prisoners “via tablets or 14 kiosks.” AC ¶¶ 26, 32. In Honea, the Ninth Circuit held providing “kiosks” alone for prisoners to 15 review “mail to inmates” is “an adequate substitute for regular distribution of paper copies.” 876 16 F.3d at 970, 976. Kiosks “provide a meaningful way” for prisoners and non-prisoners to 17 communicate. Id. at 976. Likewise, the HRDC court held that making digitized copies of inmate 18 mail “available on . . . electronic tablet[s]” alone “more than satisfie[s] [Turner’s] second prong.” 19 HRDC, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2023 WL 1473863, at *8. Here, the County provides inmates with 20 digitized copies of mail on both “tablets” and “kiosks.” AC ¶¶ 26, 32. Thus, as a matter of law, the 21 County has “more than satisfied [Turner’s] second prong.” See HRDC, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2023 22 WL 1473863, at *8; accord Honea, 876 F.3d at 970, 976.

23 (iii) An Accommodation Would Endanger Inmates and Staff

24 “The third Turner factor requires [courts] to consider ‘the impact accommodation of the 25 asserted constitutional right will have on guards and other inmates, and on the allocation of prison 26 resources generally.’” Honea, 876 F.3d at 976 (quoting Turner, 482 U.S. at 90). A policy passes 27 this test when accommodating the inmate would come “at a cost of increased risk of danger to the 28 inmate population as well as the staff.” Chau v. Young, 2014 WL 4100635, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Aug.

1 20, 2014). A policy likewise satisfies this test if accommodating the inmate would require “that 2 additional time and resulting expense would . . . have to be spent searching . . . for contraband” 3 because the materials requested by the inmate are ““serviceable for smuggling . . . drugs”” or other 4 ““contraband into [the] institution”” and are ““difficult to search effectively.”” Antonetti v.
 5 McDaniels, 2021 WL 624241, at *13 (D. Nev. Jan. 25, 2021) (quoting Bell v. Wolfish, 441 U.S.
 6 520, 551 (1979)). The County’s mail policy satisfies both these criteria.

7 “Narcotics introduction pose[s] a risk to the health, safety, and security of the Jail’s 8 prisoners and staff.” HRDC, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2023 WL 1473863, at *1. As Judge Breyer found:
 9 “Fentanyl is deadly. While heroin generally contains only 5%–15% active drug, fentanyl is often 10 100% pure.” City & Cnty. of San Francisco v. Purdue Pharma, L.P., 620 F. Supp. 3d 936, 22 U.S.
 11 Dist. LEXIS 142962, at *32 (N.D. Cal. 2022) (citation omitted). It is “100 times more potent than 12 morphine and as much as 50 times more potent than heroin.” Id. Even “[a] dash of fentanyl—not 13 much larger than a few grains of sand—can be fatal.” Id. at *33. This shows accommodating 14 Plaintiffs’ demands would increase the risk of fentanyl entering the jail, which poses deadly 15 consequences. This also would substantially raise the risks faced by jail staff. Plaintiffs represent 16 “[o]n information and belief” that there is “consensus that incidental fentanyl exposure does not 17 pose a health risk.” AC ¶ 9 (emphasis added). But, as courts have repeatedly found, this fanciful 18 assertion is false. Material containing “suspected fentanyl” must be handled with extreme caution 19 “because death can result if just a small amount makes contact with a person’s skin.” U.S. v.
 20 Joseph, 978 F.3d 1251, 1260 (11th Cir. 2020). Cases recognizing this proposition are legion.¹⁰

21 Accommodating Plaintiffs’ demands would also require the jail “to allocate more time, 22 money, and personnel” to detect and prevent fentanyl. HRDC, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2023 WL 23 1473863, at *8 (quoting Prison Legal News v. Sec’y, Fla. Dep’t of Corr., 890 F.3d 954, 973 (11th

24
 25 ¹⁰ E.g., U.S. v. Harrington, 557 F. Supp. 3d 232, 333 (D.N.H. 2021) (“fentanyl can . . . be harmful 26 if exposed to human skin”); U.S. v. Ford, 2021 WL 602927, at *3 (N.D. Ohio Feb. 16, 2021) 27 (“fentanyl . . . when absorbed through the skin when law enforcement comes in contact with it . . .
 28 can be fatal”); U.S. v. Gilliam, 2020 WL 4570060, at *24 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 7, 2020) (“fentanyl” is “extremely dangerous and even fatal through mere contact with human skin and pose[s] an additional risk if the substance were to become airborne”); U.S. v. Santiago, 2017 WL 2290140, at *3 (E.D. Va. May 25, 2017) (“Fentanyl is a legitimate safety concern because it causes harm through direct skin contact.”).

1 Cir. 2018)). Visually “inspecting incoming mail” for fentanyl is ineffective because “methods for 2 disguising narcotic-treated paper [have] grown increasingly sophisticated and visual inspection
 3 often fail[s].” HRDC, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2023 WL 1473863, at *1. And buying machines “to scan 4 incoming mail for narcotics” is prohibitively expensive and, critically, such machines “[can]not 5 detect fentanyl.” Id. Thus, Turner’s and § 2600’s third factor is satisfied as a matter of law.

6 (iv) The Policy Is Not an Exaggerated Response

7 The final Turner factor asks “whether the regulation is an exaggerated response to [the 8 jail’s] concerns.” Snow, 128 Cal. App. 4th at 393. Invoking this factor, Plaintiffs plead (again) 9 “[o]n information and belief” that “mail is not a significant source of fentanyl or other drugs in 10 San Mateo County’s jails” and that there is no evidence “that fentanyl [is] a significant problem 11 within . . . the County’s jails.” AC ¶¶ 9, 50 (emphasis added). These self-serving and fanciful 12 allegations are irrelevant. Turner does not require officials “to wait until there is a breach of 13 security . . . in order to take preventative measures.” Loehr v. Nev., 2005 WL 8161739, at *9 (D.
 14 Nev. Dec. 5, 2005). Thus, “courts do not require an actual breach of security before upholding a 15 regulation designed to prevent it.”¹¹ Kuperman v. Wrenn, 645 F.3d 69, 75 (1st Cir. 2011). Turner 16 enables jail staff “to anticipate security problems and to adopt innovative solutions” before a 17 dangerous event occurs. Thompson, 25 Cal. 4th at 134. Thus, “Turner does not require the Jail to 18 prove prior instances of narcotics introduction” through the mail “before enacting a policy to 19 prevent such an eventuality.” HRDC, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2023 WL 1473863, at *8. Even if the 20 jail’s concern about “materials containing contraband” being mailed to prisoners “was 21 hypothetical in nature, the possibility that such a thing could happen makes logical sense.” Id.

22 It is beyond dispute that “[t]he opioid crisis has infiltrated communities throughout the 23 country,” including the Bay Area. City & Cnty. of San Francisco, v. Purdue Pharma L.P., 491 F.
 24 Supp. 3d 610, 629 (N.D. Cal. 2020). And “it is common knowledge that fentanyl is particularly

25
 26 ¹¹ See, e.g., Prison Legal News, 890 F.3d at 968 (“The Turner standard does not require the 27 Department to present evidence of an actual security breach to satisfy the first factor.”); *U.S. v.
 28 Stotts*, 925 F.2d 83, 87 (4th Cir. 1991) (courts “will not require that an actual breach of security occur before upholding regulations designed to prevent it”); HRDC, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2023 WL 1473863, at *6 (same).

1 deadly.” Commonwealth v. Burton, 234 A.3d 824, 833 (Pa. Sup. Ct. 2020). “Between 1999 and 2 2016, more than 350,000 people died from opioid-related overdoses—2017, alone, added nearly 3 48,000 people to the total number of opioid-related deaths.” Purdue Pharma L.P., 491 F. Supp. 3d 4 at 629. Thus, courts routinely take “judicial notice that heroin/fentanyl addiction in this country
 5 has reached crisis levels and that Fentanyl is an especially addicting, dangerous, and unpredictable 6 opiate that has exacerbated the crisis, resulting in many deaths.” U.S. v. Lebron, 492 F. Supp. 3d 7 737, 740 (N.D. Ohio 2020). Indeed, the crisis is so severe that Governor Newsom, exercising his 8 powers as the State’s Commander-in-Chief, recently deployed the National Guard “to combat 9 fentanyl trafficking in San Francisco.”¹² Similarly, Speaker-of-the-House-Emerita Pelosi asked the 10 Justice Department to deploy “enhanced federal resources” to “San Francisco to combat fentanyl 11 trafficking” because the opioid crisis’s effects on the Bay Area are so grave that “local officials 12 and law enforcement” are insufficient, necessitating a “whole of government approach.”¹³

13 Jails obviously are not immune from this epidemic. As Judge Breyer observed, “[n]ot only 14 has the opioid crisis impacted San Francisco’s streets, but [its] jails are seeing an influx of opioid 15 contraband.” Purdue Pharma L.P., 491 F. Supp. 3d at 629. Accordingly, there can be no doubt 16 that it was proper for the County “to anticipate security problems” presented by fentanyl “and to 17 adopt innovative solutions” before tragedy strikes. See Thompson, 25 Cal. 4th at 134. Thus, the 18 mail policy satisfies Turner’s final factor as a matter of law.

19 Because, for the reasons explained above, “all four Turner factors favor [Defendants]” as a 20 matter of law, § 2600 dictates that Plaintiffs “cannot prevail” on their free speech claim and, as 21 such, it must “be dismissed for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted.” See 22 Fields v. Paramo, 2019 WL 4640502, at *6 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 24, 2019).
